CONTRIBUTE MUCH

Every year a large group of American and Soviet scientists, together with a few representatives from Europe, Japan and the developing countries, meet to discuss problems of human survival to whose solution science can make a significant contribution. The conferences are called the Pugwash Conferences after the small town in Nova Scotia where the original meeting took place. In the dozen or so years during which the conferences have continued to take place, a number of enormously important consequences have followed from the confidential, open and very largely unfettered Soviet-American exchanges that are possible at these meetings. — Antigonish (N.S.)

CHANGING VALUES

Less than 200 years ago the death sentence was being imposed for robbery, and a man could be strung up to a tree without trial for stealing a horse. Even a hundred years ago a man in this area of Quebec was given a 20-year sentence for breaking into a home and stealing $2.00. There is no doubt that our values have changed. Today we regard a human life as being more valuable than a few possessions or a horse. We seemed to have reached a point where causes are of more importance than personal property, and, in some cases, even a human life. — Stanstead (Que.) Journal

STABLE INVESTMENT

In the face of changing market conditions, Canada Savings Bonds represent a stable method of investing and saving to several million individuals across the country. A large segment of these people buy their Canada Savings Bonds each year through the payroll savings plan at their place of work. Since the money is automatically deducted from a person's wages or salary before he receives it, the temptation to forego the usual regular savings plan brings more positive results than good intentions. — Fort Frances (Ont.) Times

MOSTLY CAUTIOUS

Optimistic grain sales forecasts have come one on top of the other in the last few weeks. The farmers we've talked to can best be described as cautiously optimistic... but mostly cautious. — Swift Current (Sask.) Sun

You Won't See This In The Country

The butter sculpture at this year's Royal Agricultural Winter Fair is a must for girl watchers. It's the Farmer's Daughter, modelled after a REAL farmer's daughter, 18 year old Dianne Gunning, who is Ontario Dairy Princess for 1970.

A University of Guelph Student, junior farmer and 4-H Club member, Dianne lives on her father's farm near Tweed Ontario and knows first hand what farming is all about.

W. A. Clements the butter sculptor is an art teacher at Danforth Technical School in Toronto but home is a farm near Brooklin, Ontario.

This is his twelfth year to create the butter sculpture, always a popular attraction at the Fair. He chose the Farmer's Daughter this year to carry out the "Walk in the Country" theme of the 1970 Royal Winter Fair. He's modelling Dianne from her photograph. She's on an overseas trip — one of the prizes that went with the Dairy Princess title. The calf will be sculpted from life.

Creating an image in butter is similar to working in clay, Mr. Clements explains. There's one difference however. He has to work inside the giant refrigerator at the Coliseum because butter can melt. "Usually the weather has turned cold outside, so the inside temperature doesn't bother me that much."

The sculpture sponsored by the Ontario Milk and Cream Producers, is located on Dairy Lane.

The forty-second edition of the world's largest annual country fair runs November 13 through November 21.

New Breeds At "Royal"

You see it first at the Royal.

This year five new breeds of cattle will be exhibited at the world's largest annual country fair, the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair which runs November 13 through November 21 in the Coliseum of Toronto's Exhibition Park.

They are: Brown Swiss-dairy cattle; Santa Gertrudis; Simmental; Limousin and Galloway.

The emergence of new breeds reflects the growing trend to cross breeding designed to promote faster growth; larger animals and to accentuate certain characteristics, such as muscling and freedom from horns. New judging classifications are added when a breed has reached sufficient number of registered animals in Canada. Last year for example, a classification for Charolais a breed of French origin was established. At the first Charolais Sale of Stars, 22 head were sold for a record average of $5,334. Top animal, an open heifer was purchased for $17,000.

A change in Swine classification also illustrates diversification in breeding. Last year there were three: Yorkshire, Landrace and Lacombe. This year the Lacombe class has been widened to include any other breed, and Hampshire and Durocs will be among the competitors.
