"The economic factors have in no way reduced the necessity to proceed as soon as economically justified," he said.

The first delay was announced Jan. 9 by Company President Harold Griffin. At that time he said the first phase (a hot strip mill) would be postponed beyond the spring of 1970.

Stelco announced it was behind the purchase of 6,600 acres of land near Nanticoke for the purpose of a steel making complex in March, 1968. The land takes up portions of Walpole township in Haldimand and Woodhouse in Norfolk.

Mr. Gordon told the rotary meeting that its modernization and expansion program at Hamilton Works in Hamilton cost $350 million.

He said the plant will be able to produce 6 million tons compared with 4.75 million.

"Tentative projections made with respect to Canadian steel capacities by the end of the seventies indicate a figure of some 20 million tons — not quite double our present capacity.

These predictions hold up and Stelco is to maintain its current share of the market, this will entail an expansion of our facilities over and

"Therefore we will continue to develop our strategy for Lake Erie, keeping the situation under continual review and constantly revising and updating our forward planning in order that we will be in a position to undertake appropriate expansion of our facilities whenever the overall economic environment is such that a project of this magnitude becomes a viable and realistic proposition," he said.

He said the completion of expansion and modernization of Stelco's facilities now underway since 1960 will cost some $900 million when complete.

He predicted a new steel making process will be used at Nanticoke. This will be a direct reduction process that was developed in co-operation with Lurgi-Chemie of West Germany. The Republic Steel Corporation and the National Lead Company of the United States. The procedure is known as the SL/RN process.

"Stelco — Lurgi have perfected a method of continuously charging the reduced material into an electric arc furnace as a substitute for steel scrap and a means of increasing furnace productivity.

"At Nanticoke using a combination of kilns and electric furnaces will avoid the necessity of installing large and costly coke plants, blast furnaces and basic oxygen steel making furnaces," he said.

Mayor Alfred Judd, of Simcoe, a rotarian, thanked the speaker.

He said Mr. Gordon's remarks made us more aware of the company's problems.

"For example most of us were not aware of the competition that exists from other countries.

"Your remarks also enlightened us on our concern for our own plight," said Mr. Judd.

He cited two reasons: * The industry may develop too quickly for the communities to keep up.

* Other industry may not develop fast enough to keep industry interested in settling here.

Mr. Judd said the remarks have given us all something to think about in terms as to how to help solve our own problems in tying them in with yours.

"I hope to see some development in the next few years so that we can resolve these problems together," he said.

Alex Fisher, a company representative, fielded some questions from the floor.

He said the Lake Erie project would take about three years to complete the first phase after construction starts.

On a question on how soon Stelco's industrial park would be developed (3,500 acres of the overall tract have been set aside for an industrial park).

For each additional 50,000 hours worked without accidents, five more names are drawn, and they get $25 each. If a lost-time injury occurs, the division starts again at zero.

Hagersville Division is now leading the way with more than 305,000 hours without a lost-time injury. But the contest goes on. If a division works half a million hours accident-free, one lucky draw winner will get a household appliance or $500 in cash.

After that, for every additional 250,000 hours worked free of lost-time injuries, one name will be drawn to win an appliance or $500.

After all five divisions work a total of a million hours accident-free, one winner will get an appliance or $500.

And that won't be the end of it. For every further 500,000 hours without injury, one draw winner will get an appliance or $500.

At this point, if anyone in the company has a lost-time injury he won't be too popular: the whole group will have to start all over again.
