N.F.U. Insists On Increased Prices Before Market Quotas

The National Farmers Union has outlined to the Canadian Dairy Commission conditions that should be met for dairy farmers before Market Share Quotas (M.S.Q.) are enforced in Ontario and Quebec. Two of the main points were: substantially increased prices to producers and, reasonable maximums on quotas.

The C.D.C. was also advised that enacting Market Share Quotas, a major change in dairy policy, with very little consultation of dairy farmers was a deplorable fact. Market Share Quotas will allocate the amount of milk that each producer can sell on the domestic market. Production over this amount would sell at world prices.

Chairman of the N.F.U. Dairy Committee, Wm. Langdon of Lakeside, Ontario, said that many farmers don't even know that market share quotas are being implemented, let alone any of the details. Mr. Langdon stated that his committee intends to inform as many producers as possible of the plan before it is commenced in Ontario, which it is expected will be this coming October.

"We are also dedicated, and will intensify, an N.F.U. campaign to improve returns to dairy farmers across Canada", stated Mr. Langdon. He said that a major increase in the price of industrial milk is long overdue, and believes farmers are going to insist that an adequate price be established. Extensive imports on dairy products and the pending implementation of production management by M.S.Q. are pressures for increased prices.

"There is no reason", he said, "that farmers should accept controlled production without assurance of adequate price. Increasing the price now would have little, if any, effect of increasing production, especially if producers know they will be under market share quotas in the next dairy year."

Mr. Langdon said that the base price for any milk should be not lower than $5.50 per cwt., with classified pricing at higher levels according to the end use, or the dairy product to which it is processed. Increased prices to consumers would not be necessary in some products and would be minimal in others. He said that the spread now, between what the producer receives and the consumer pays is entirely out of line.

"It is time the efficiency level demanded of farmers are also accepted by other segments of the industry", he said.

Referring to market share quotas, Mr. Langdon said that the National Farmers Union is recommending that quota maximums be established on the same basis as the Canadian Dairy Commission has maintained for subsidy under the current dairy policy 400,000 lbs. yearly for single farm operation and 700,000 for a two man partnership operation.

Mr. Langdon said that the N.F.U. insists farmers themselves should have the right to decide what the maximums will be, in a democratic way.

Majority Of Women

TORONTO (CP) — Any male factory worker with an injury or disease had best not be what Women's Liberation members call a male chauvinist if he lives in Toronto.

Seven out of 10 medical officers in the Ontario workmen's compensation board claims department in Toronto are women. They examine hundreds of workers who apply to the board for compensation for injuries suffered on the job.

With the majority of doctors at the board being women, any man who believes in the inferiority of women — the definition of a male chauvinist — will be taken aback.

Three of the seven women doctors are specialists in industrial medicine. Dr. Doreen Young is an expert on industrial eye injuries. Dr. Dorothy Burton on industrial diseases and Dr. Margaret Haley on effects of industrial noise.

The reasons for these women concentrating on industrial medicine are varied. "In general practice you're on call virtually all the time", says Dr. Young.

"Your days at the office or the hospital begin around 10 a.m. and last until maybe nine or ten at night. At the workmen's compensation board, you begin at 9:30 and quit at 4:30 — seven hours."

Dr. Young, who is single, says the set hours have freed her to develop her sewing and gardening.

There are disadvantages to withdrawing from general practice, Dr. Young finds. "I think I miss a GP's patient contact the most", she said. "But there are pros and cons to both types of practice. You can't have everything."

Dr. Haley, the board's specialist on industrial noise, is the mother of three children, aged 17, 18, and 20.

She does her own housework and cooks the family meal every night after work. "Set hours are good when you have a family and other duties at home", she said. It allowed her to combine the roles of mother and doctor.

Dr. Burton, the specialist on industrial diseases, is single like Dr. Young. She chose industrial medicine over general practice because of her deep liking for factory people.

Also like her colleague Dr. Young, she appreciates the freedom that accompanies set hours of practice.

All three women doctors find their particular variety of medicine satisfying — a prerequisite for amicable patient-doctor relations.

If there are male chauvinists among the doctor's clients, Dr. Haley can defeat their objections.

"Women tend to be more thorough", she said. "This might not be too good if you have a lot of work to do, but it means each claim receives full consideration."
