

The Weeklies Say

PANDORA'S BOX

The CPR's passenger service chief earlier admitted the railway definitely wanted out of passenger service. By their approach to the whole question of rail passenger service, CPR officials may discover that they've inadvertently opened a Pandora's Box of troubles that will not be to their liking. - The Swift Current (Sask.) Sun.

NATIVE POLICE NEEDED

More native policemen should be hired to do the work the R.C.M.P. is expected to do. The band policeman would be responsible to the people and would have genuine understanding and concern for the welfare of their own. - Edmonton (Alta.) The Native People

POTENTIAL DANGER

Insurance companies have taken the "hard line" against users of marijuana. The idea is to avoid things whose harmlessness has not been demonstrated, and to be cautious in the interest of human survival. - The Rimby (Alta.) Record

WANT DIRECTION

Most of our youth are not dope addicts, alcoholics or protest minded. All they really want is some responsible direction to fill not only the required education period of their lives but also leisure time activities. Some top-flight level of communication is needed between area youth leaders and the established community organizations. - Vernon (B.C.) News

RE-EXAMINE SPENDING

If inflation is to be checked it is certain the provinces cannot leave all the responsibility with Ottawa. They should re-examine their own operational spending in the light of the urgent need for restraint. - Chilliwack (B.C.) Progress

YOUTH HOSTELS

We see no reason to complain because young people are travelling across the country. Nor do we see anything unreasonable in their request for hostel facilities. Hosting has been a perfectly acceptable part of life in European countries for decades. Why should it not be encouraged, and properly administered, in Canada? - Chilliwack (B.C.) Progress

PLAGUE OF RED TAPE

Sometimes we wonder why one department of the federal government is charged with the responsibility of aiding Northern development when other departments are pulling in the opposite direction. - The Yellowknife (N.W.T.) News of the North
