

Dollars And Good Sense

by William J. Martin
Dear Mr. Martin:
My wife and I have been discussing the possibility of her returning to work this fall, now that the youngest of our two children will be entering second grade. We've been weighing all the variables about this situation but we've probably left out a few. What's your advice on working wives?

Mr. J.B.

Dear Mr. J.B.

The income your wife might earn from a job can be a great boost to the family finances or could provide a lot less than you expect.
If your wife gets a full time job, for example, you will probably need to hire someone to take care of your children in the afternoons and do a little housework. Add this to the costs of transportation, lunches, clothing and even added food costs (because your wife will have to rely more on expensive convenience foods) and the net income may not be as much as you've anticipated.

Consider also that the added income will put you into a higher tax bracket and to compute the true net income for your wife's job, this added tax burden should be deducted.
With all these deductions, a job that grosses $90 a week for instance, could dwindle to a true net of about $25. Not much for the effort and inconvenience of a full time job.

A part-time job, on the other hand, can actually net more for your wife because several high expenses will have been eliminated. She could arrange her hours so that she could be home to take care of your children and the housework - two big expenses.
A part-time job can be difficult, of course. Handling her new duties plus all of her present chores can put quite a strain on your wife. Any outside employment needs the cooperation of all family members.

My advice is to add up all the expenses involved in your wife's working - and I mean all, so you can determine the true net income of your wife's job. Only then can you make a fair evaluation of whether or not she should work and how much she should work.

KING STREET HAGERSVILLE

On The Farm Front

The intent of the new Code of Practice for new or renovated livestock buildings, animal waste disposal systems is misunderstood. It is operating as intended and should help to solve the livestock farmer's problem that may arise in his neighbourhood.

It is intended to keep farmers in business and to close them down. The suggested changes in the freeze also waste disposal, capacity and distance to neighbouring dwellings. Provided that reasonable management is practised, the provisions should not be a difficulty arising as a result of complaints from neighbouring farmers included in the complaint about odours!

A new livestock building that cannot be used because of an order under the Pollution Control Act 1967 would be a costly expensive investment on any farm. For these reasons before a building permit is issued, a "Certificate of Approval" must be obtained from the Air Management Branch of the Department of Energy and Resources.

And somewhere along the line those who decide in the rural atmosphere have to come to accept part of the atmosphere that result from that reasonable management of livestock enterprises.

Members of the Haldimand Soil and Conservation Improvement Association recently toured the farm of Harold Bradford, Dunnville. Those in attendance were treated to a look at excellent stands of corn, soybeans as well as direct seeded alfalfa of this year and last. Harold has been successful in getting alfalfa established without a nurse crop. The extra crop produced in the seedling year has as much value as the grain crop that would otherwise be produced.

Federation News

Otto Crone
Ontario government attempting to take forward in the long to Ontario farm. If a new bill is introduced by Minister Dalton Bales, farmers will not be out of house and within the next few developing a new land schedule for farm evaluation. This schedule might be available for discussion in six months, but it will be several years before the department is ready to revise all assessments.

As the situation stands now, it appears that Ontario farmers may have some tax relief in the near future.

REPORT

Wednesday, July 14, the department of police affairs announced the proposal of a bill which would put a freeze on all assessments. At that time, news media reported that the proposed bill would freeze home assessments - to be effective in 1972.

The suggested changes in the freeze also waste disposal, capacity and distance to neighbouring dwellings. Provided that reasonable management is practised, the provisions should not be a difficulty arising as a result of complaints from neighbouring farmers included in the complaint about odours!

Cobb - Thompson

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cobb (Alan Lewis Photo)

On Sat., July 31, 1971, at Grace United Church, Port Dover, JoAnn L. Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Thompson, 15 Crescent Park, became the bride of Charles E. Cobb, son of Mrs. Hanna Cobb of Port Dover and Joseph Cobb of British Columbia. Rev. J. H. Vardy performed the ceremony in the presence of 100 guests.

The organist was Willard Challand and soloist was Rory Dodd.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a NEED AID T90 TORONTO (CP) - Any change in government aid to separate schools will also include Jewish and Protestant parochial schools, Rabbi S. E. Rosenberg said. He added that he backs the "provision announced by officials of the separate school system and expects provincial government consideration of 5,000 Jewish students attending day schools in Ontario.

INQUIRY OPENED SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) - Young men with long hair sometimes have to put up with more than verbal attacks on their crowning glory. A 50 year old man has been charged with assault following an incident which allegedly began with him calling a long-haired youth Tarzan. When the youth retorted that he wasn't making sense, the man attacked him with a sharp, as yet unidentified object. An inquiry has been opened by the police.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Summer Garden, Port Dover. The head table was centred with a three tier wedding cake trimmed in mauve and purple flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Cobb's honeymoon trip was in Northern Ontario.

For travelling the bride chose a hot pants outfit of floral print in green purple and black with white collar and cuffs. Her corsage was white orchids.

On their return they will reside at 207 Nelson St. E. Port Dover.

Out of town guests were present from Durham, Varney, Hamilton, Burlington, Caledonia, Coruna, Toronto, Jarvis, Waterford and surrounding district. Among the guests were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Brown of Durham, who have recently celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary.

Prior to her wedding the bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower given by Margaret Thompson, a trousseau shower given by Linda Williams and a linen shower given by Lee Hitchon.

Brenda Onifrichuk of Waterford, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Margaret Thomson, sister of the bride, and Linda Williams friend of the bride. Flower girl was Judith Thompson. All wore royal purple hot pants outfits trimmed in white with large white picture hats.

Walter Cobb of London was the best man for his brother. Ushers were John MacDonald and Robert Thompson. Ronald Cobb was ring bearer.
