Federation News

by Roy Hagan
Some 30 Individual Service members of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture attended a recent meeting to discuss the 1970 farm tax reduction program.

It was noted the farm tax reduction was gained for farmers as a result of efforts of OFA. If you think back to this past summer and remember some of the statements made by government leaders on why the cost of education could not be removed from property you can see how OFA helped. The speed the legislation was passed by government to prevent municipal councils from withholding grants to school boards shows it can act fast if it wants, also how quickly a 25 percent refund on these taxes was announced by government for farmers, when they decided to hold a tax withholding day Sept. 28. If this is the way of politicians have to gain favor to get into power. It would be nice if they could find a different industry than agriculture.

At the meeting it was decided an all out effort would be made to get as many farmers as possible to become new Individual Service Members of OFA.

Communion Sunday will be observed during the regular morning service at 10.15 Jan. 10.

Sleighs Increase Fun

Cold weather fun on snowmobiles is a big part of today's new recreational togetherness among modern families.

Entire families can join in the thrills of snowmobiling with sleek sleighs designed to hitch behind a snow machine. The specially designed sleds are built to give comfortable rides over the snow to one or two passengers, adults or children.

Snowmobile safety experts recommend that snowmobile operators proceed with caution when towing a sleigh, and that a rigid hitch always be used between the snowmobile and sleigh.

VEVO STRAP TORONTO (CP) - Toronto parents who want to exempt their children from strapping may do so now by writing a letter to their school principal. The board of education recently passed a recommendation from its special committee on corporal punishment that parents be granted the privilege.

Controlled Sale Sensible Approach

A vote to establish a new era for the Village will be held Monday.

Citizens will be asked to decide if liquor lounges and dining room lounges will be established in the Village.

It would seem the controlled sale of liquor is the sensible approach, especially when many municipalities in the near vicinity of the Village has such outlets.

A new motor hotel with good dining facilities would certainly be an asset to the municipality because of the lure of tourist dollars as well as for local residents.

The new enterprise will also mean more employment for the village and will have the effect of a small industry. The room facilities of the new hotel have already been booked for the upcoming International plowing match scheduled for Haldimand this year. This could mean more such conventions for the village.

All these boys are to be congratulated on their record.

Dear Sir:

It would be appreciated if you would print the following obit for my Dad. He had many fond memories of your paper as I believe he started his newspaper career with "The Record" way back when.

Yours truly,

MR. CLYDE B. CORRIGALL

Clyde B. Corrigan, who died in Victoria B.C. on the 14th Dec. 1970, came to Ontario in 1947 with his wife and son. They lived in Royston before moving to Victoria in 1956. Born in Nanticoke Ontario, he began teaching school at age 17. After a brief career in that field he entered the newspaper profession and worked on the Toronto World, Hamilton Herald, Windsor Star, Detroit Free Press and Detroit Times as reporter, editor and columnist.

His wife, formerly Elsie M. Hayes predeceased him in 1960. Surviving are his son David and three grandchildren living at Nanaimo V.I.B.C.

A memorial Mass was held at Sands Memorial Chapel of Chimes, Victoria B.C. on Dec. 16, 1970.

Editors Note: We extend our sympathy to the family of the late Mr. Corrigan. We wonder how many people got their start in the newspaper world with The Record.

One winter we took her down for six weeks and put her in school there, which worked out fine. But she was only in Grade 1 then.

I guess this might strike some people as being strange, but when I think of Florida I think of old people.

The publicity shots you see in the travel sections and in TV commercials for cars and beer all show young females in bathing suits romping around the surf. I always know the pictures are posed — and probably the models flown straight back to New York after a day's work. If there actually WAS that kind of girlish running along the beach, the number of middle-aged shell-hunters knocked flat would number in the hundreds per day.

Florida is really a peninsula entirely surrounded by ladies in their 40s, 50s and 60s, with their skirts tucked into their bloomers, walking barefoot and happy all up to a good fish dinner at the end of the day. If they don't feel like fish tonight, they might hand the catch to some fellow fisherman who's a little short.

Some fish at night, too, with traps for crabs or shrimp. But any bridge is lined with fishermen and almost all of them are old men and women who come down as much for the companionship as they do for the fish.

They read, talk, throw scraps to the pelicans, and walk slowly home at night — and it sure beats wearing overshoes and overcoats and shoveling snow.

That's Florida, to me.

Community centers and facilities need improvements, while governments waste millions in welfare to keep healthy men idle. This is folly for the taxpayer and unhealthy for those on the dole.

Ontario now makes grants to municipalities, but the situation gets steadily worse.

The Province should assume all welfare costs and establish an Ontario job corps. All able-bodied unemployed could be given work at the Provincial minimum wage till economic conditions improve and they can get better paying jobs elsewhere.

The money would be spent on welfare anyway; the taxpayers will get something for their taxes; the jobless can have some work and we can abolish welfare for the able-bodied.

Sir:

I hope everyone saw the film on television (Take Thirty) a short time ago, which illustrated a most barbaric and atrocious way in which Canadian fur-bearing animals are trapped.

I urge people to please write to their members of parliament urging them to institute a program that will bring about the elimination of the leg-hold traps as soon as possible, as this situation on our trap lines is socially unacceptable in an enlightened country like this.

There is absolutely no valid reason for such unnecessary cruelty, as there are humane traps available to trappers now, and more research is in progress to develop others.

There is no reason for Canada to be so far behind other countries, which have abolished leg-hold traps many years ago.

Anyone wishing further information about humane traps, write to the Canadian Association for Humane Trapping, Box 934, Station F, Toronto 5, Ontario.

Florida and the old folks

There's nothing like a few weeks of snow and frost and cars that won't start in the morning to make me start thinking about Florida.

I'm not going there this year, for a variety of reasons — one being that we have a daughter in Grade 4.

I really like being in Florida in January and February, but I guess I'm getting soft in my old age. I don't like going without the little girl, and it isn't a good idea to take her out of school for a couple of weeks in the middle of the term.

One winter we took her down for six weeks and put her in school there, which worked out fine. But she was only in Grade 1 then.

I guess this might strike some people as being strange, but when I think of Florida I think of old people.
