Have you ever wondered how your family's income increased living costs, as compares to others or to the measured by the average family's? How much Department's Bureau of do you think the average Labor Statistic's consumer urban family of four needs price index, to the items the country. For example, to get by these days? A MATTER OF MONEY

Science has made such magnificent strides in conquering disease that most of us hold as an act of faith that a cure for cancer is only a few discoveries away and that research is doing all humanly possible to speed that day. It comes as a shock to have a 28-man panel of scientists, businessmen and others report to the III Senate committee which appointed it that cancer will be conquered only by an effort of the magnitude of the atomic bomb or Apollo space projects. The commit said that some $6 billion would be needed during the remainder of this decade if a scientific breakthrough was going to be achieved. - Campbellton (N.B.) Tribune

PASSING THE BUCK

One of the problems with governments today is that there is continuous "passing the buck." Mayor Aimo Marshall and some of his councillors are quick to criticize Queen's Park for not being acquainted with local problems. When the question of operating snowmobiles in a community is concerned, it appears that local officials believe that government officials domiciled in Toronto, are better suited to deal with the problem than those in a place like Fort Frances where snowmobiles are encountered and heard at all hours of the day and night. - Fort Frances (Ont.) Times

SHOULD BE TRIED The City of Yellowknife does not have the right to install parking meters because they constitute charging for the streets when the city does not own them. The same restriction does not apply to the use of signs restricting parking . . . Some members of city council have indicated willingness to test such signs . . . The idea should be tried before an overdose of cars . . . chokes up the business area completely. - Yellowknife (N.W.T.) News of the North

MUST BE SMARTER

Young people can certainly find much that is not admirable in the adult society around them. They can be critical, and with reason, of the attitudes displayed by many of their elders in respect to the use of alcohol and tobacco. What youth must come to reckon with is the mounting volume of evidence against using such (drugs) aids for escapism. Taking up a dangerous habit just because your father fell victim to it is both unrealistic and dangerous. Today's youth are going to have to prove they are smarter than their elders. - Chilliwack (B.C.)

FLYING START

Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Reagan is making a flying start . . . against poor housing conditions in his province, and one of the new ideas is the building of shell homes . . . Surely this is a new approach which might be investigated in the Yukon? - Whitehorse
