his best to conquer.

Farmers, like all other industries, contribute to pollution also, through the removal of waste and the use of pesticides. Naturally, these same Ontario farmers recognize the need for pollution control but they are concerned with methods of control, cost, and that regulations designed to curb air and water pollution could severely limit their farming operations. As a result, the Ontario Federation of Agriculture presented to the Legislature of Ontario the following recommendations to deal with agriculture pollution:

1) Farmers want to be involved in decisions on pollution control in agriculture because these decisions contain the biggest impact on farmers and also farmers who have the experience in such matters would be able to provide needed information. Due to this desire for active participation, O.F.A. would also like the jurisdiction of agricultural pollution and pesticide control to come under the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food since this is the branch of government which already advises Ontario farmers and is knowledgeable on the danger levels of pesticide and waste usage.

2) A code of practice is already in effect in which farmers are recommended to follow a certain guideline in expanding or building new farm operations. Parallel guidelines should exist for those who plan to build homes or businesses in a rural area. Also those who do build near a livestock operation must accept the possibility of a certain amount of odour some of the time as part of the rural environment and thus sign an agreement not to make this a basis for future law suit. As a result, the O.F.A. recommends that the Ontario government introduce a system whereby non-farmers require a certificate for buildings erected near farms and these certificates should be made soon for farm and residential development to avoid unnecessary delay and expense.

Of course, the O.F.A. had further recommendations on this topic and these will be related in a future column. At this point, it is hoped that one will remember that "the cost of pollution is high, the technology is not always available, the problems to surmount are numerous but our battle against pollution must eventually be won."

SWEET CHARITY

That beautiful word charity, so sweet, has been taken out of circulation. Even out of practice since they changed "charity" as a word for describing the most important word in our inheritance of Christianity. Somewhere along the line, "charity" got clipped to "love." Everybody wants love, natch, now don't they? "Love" gets mixed up with sin, under the guise of respectability. Love now is more termed sex. Ugh! Lillooet (B.C.) Bridge River - Lillooet News

THE WEEKLIES SAY...

MONEY MARKET

The money markets seem to be working their way out of the "dollar crisis" with rather more ease than seemed possible at the height of earlier uncertainties. The outcome so far has vindicated the Economist's judgment that the exchange turmoil was "not a grave crisis and it will need more than the normal incompetence in the banking profession and national exchequers to turn it into one." — Campbellton (N.B.) Tribune

FEMINIST BACKLASH

Militant feminists are beginning to feel the uncomfortable draft of backlash. Men have even gone so far as to suggest that women should not get alimony — or that women should pay alimony after a divorce. They rub their hands together at the prospect of the little woman helping out with the family income. Psychiatrists have rosily prophesied fewer heart attacks, ulcers and hypertension among men. But they foresee more of these predominantly male ailments turning up in women as they assume a more active role in the working world. — Stanstead (Que.) Journal

LIP SERVICE

So long as the manufacture and sale of any product considered potentially productive of social evil or injuries to health is not only condoned but approved by licensing and taxation, such bans as the one in B.C. (on cigarette and liquor advertising) will never be believed as anything more than lip service and tokenism. — Swift Current (Sask.) Sun

UNBELIEVABLE

We refuse to believe the public is so incredibly stupid and gullible that they can be "hooked" into the cigarette habit by a contest that offers a color TV set in exchange for coupons from $50,000 worth of cigarettes. — Swift Current (Sask.) Sun

CO-OPERATION NEEDED

We need anti-litter laws and enforcement of them in respect of private individuals just walking down the road throwing litter on the streets, but better than any laws is the willing co-operation of citizens. — Yellowknife (N.W.T.) News of the North

We hold no brief for any particular food stores in Whitehorse, but glances at some of the meat prices in Vancouver last weekend reassured us that the high cost of living is part and parcel of the nation wide picture, not just an attempt on the part of the Yukon merchants to increase the mark-up. — Whitehorse (Y.T.) Star
