

Jarvis To Seek VON Services For Village

Jarvis Council Tuesday night decided to seek an agreement that would allow the Victorian Order of Nurses to provide their services in the village.

A delegation of the VON, F. Catharine Maddaford, national regional director of the VON, of Toronto, and Mrs. Anne Friith, chairman of the provisional committee, Haldimand County, of Dunnville, met with council to explain the VON services and the costs.

The delegation met with Walpole Township councillors Friday. Walpole has not as yet made a decision on the matter.

Mrs. Friith said that early last year four Haldimand municipalities had accepted the full services of the VON, which operates for this area from its branch office in Brantford.

When the home care service under the Haldimand-Norfolk Health Unit was instituted, Mrs. Friith said the VON was asked to extend its services to the county. She said the home care is being done in Haldimand, but that the VON would like to extend its full range of service to the 11 other municipalities in the county that at present do have this service.

Miss Maddaford explained the VON is a voluntary organization, which provides skilled nursing care for any illness in the home, whether chronic illness, care of the elderly or those who have been in accidents.

The service is provided under the direction of the family physician and is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, she said.

The service does not duplicate the service of the public health nurses in the two-county health unit.

The Brant County branch now serves all of Norfolk and the four municipalities of Haldimand, plus home care for all of Haldimand.

The VON receives its money from fees for the nursing service, from the various United Appeals and under the Home and Nursing Services Act.

The average fee per visit charged to a patient is $5.25. However, if the patient is not able to pay the full amount, a lesser amount will be charged.

The cost of the service for this year for Jarvis amounts to $221, which is a form of grant, Miss Maddaford said. The budget

Walpole Building Permits Reach $17,643,000 In '71

Construction valued at $17,643,000 was undertaken in 1971 in Walpole Township, council was told Wednesday night.

In his building inspector's report to Walpole councillors, Charles E. Pearce said that during 1971 a total of 25 new houses were built, and 16 permits were issued for new single family dwellings as well as several extensions to existing houses.

Ten permits were issued in the cottage area. According to work records, more than 15 requests for extensions and alterations were refused. There is a definite decrease in the number of families living in the cottage area from a year ago, the report states.

There were no permits issued for new commercial, industrial or manufacturing ventures, and very little expansion of existing business. Mr. Pearce noted this trend is general throughout the county. A large number of permits were issued to the farming industry for new barns, sheds, silos and grain storage.

Building permits totalled 107. Values, by month, are as follows: January, $8,500; Feb.-March, $16,988,200; April, $56,300; May, $153,500; June, $115,300; July, $59,500; August, $37,000; September, $41,000; October, $44,500; November, $68,200 and December, $71,000.

There was a total of 33 wrecking permits and six moving permits.

Hagersville's 'High Rise' Causes Concern

HAGERSVILLE (Staff) Hagersville council started off the new year with a half-hearted chuckle.

Council had received a letter for the Ontario Water Resources Commission warning council not to permit any further development of "high rise" apartments.

Reeve John Kincaid quoting from a letter from the OWRC, which noted the OWRC did not agree with the high rise apartment construction in view of the capacity of the village's sewage treatment plant. He also quoted from the letter that it stated that a grave situation could arise if development continues at its present pace and suggested that council not approve of this type of development at any time.

As Reeve John Kincaid noted, Hagersville has no high rise apartments nor has it any plans for building such structures. A high rise apartment by bylaw definition is four or more stories and Hagersville's tallest building is only three stories.

After a phone call to Toronto regarding the matter, Reeve Kincaid was assured the mention of high rise should have been written as high density.

Reeve Kincaid said council was aware the village is reaching a point of high density, in relation to the sewage treatment plant and that "I assured them we'll take their advice. It sort of shook me up at the time, however."

"This is one of the reasons why we are asking the OWRC to take over the operation of the sewage treatment plant. We realize we are approaching our optimum density."

In other matters council learned it will likely be June 1 before construction of the sewer and water system in the village's west end can get underway.

Council spent most of Monday's meeting discussing engineering matters with its engineer George McMulkin, of Proctor and Redfern, consultants.

Mr. McMulkin said he had not as yet received any agreement from the OWRC's construction division about the west end project, but that it should be in later this week. "Then we can go ahead and get it ready for tender call. I would guess it will take two months before it's ready for tender call. It would then be advertised for about four weeks."

However, Deputy-reeve Bruce Meehan said the bylaw would be handing out "too much power. It seems everything is coming under more control. A farmer can hardly turn around now without someone telling him what to do."

Coun. Harold Nie said he "was not in favor of it. We are depriving enough people of their freedom as it is. I'd hate to see a bylaw that would force a man to tear down a building."

Clerk Wilson said the deputy reeve and the councillor were "thinking of
