Editorial Comment:

Second Session Ends

The second session of the 29th legislature, which recessed Friday, was perhaps most notable for the way in which Darcy McKeough, treasurer and minister of intergovernmental affairs was busy changing the face of Ontario.

Phase 1 reports were released for the Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and Lake St. Clair regions. As part of the local government reform program, legislation was introduced to create the regional municipalities of Sudbury and Waterloo, effective Jan. 1, 1973. Legislation was also introduced to create a new city of 100,000 square miles in the Porcupine area composed of the present town of Timmins and surrounding municipalities.

A move that will also radically alter the face of Ontario and the way of life of thousands of people is the proposal for a new airport site at Pickering.

The release of Ontario's studies show the province agreed to the site despite warnings that the project could stimulate Toronto's growth, rather than Oshawa's, as anticipated.

The location of the airport is being questioned not only by members of the Opposition, but strongly by groups in the immediately affected area.

Along the way, the government has introduced some important legislation.

A new property tax credit plan was introduced to replace the old residential property tax reduction system.

The municipal elections act was introduced and passed, which creates a uniform system of election dates and terms of office for all municipalities in Ontario.

In moves to stimulate the province's economic growth on a long term basis a joint committee on economic policy was created. This consists of an inter-ministry economic studies steering committee of senior Ontario government officials along with the premier's advisory committee on economic policy.

The aim of the joint committee is to develop a co-ordinated set of policies and programs to maximize Ontario's growth and employment opportunities.

Several other pieces of legislation, along with other as yet unresolved issues won't be banded about again in the legislature until the session is resumed, probably in the fall.

OFA Membership Climbs To 11,000

The Ontario Federation of Agriculture has reached its target membership for 1972.

Federation President Gordon Hill reported that his farm organization now has just over 11,000 members. There were 7,500 members in June, 1971.

"We were very optimistic when we set our 1972 goal at 11,000 members," Hill said in Toronto last week.

"We weren't entirely sure we could reach it. But response to our program has been fantastic. Ontario farmers, more than ever before, feel they must get organized. Credit must also go to those workers whose effort and enthusiasm have brought this about." Hill said the Federation had proved its abilities as a farmers' organization. "We have won significant victories for farmers - cheaper truck licenses, expanded capital grants, reduced property tax burden and more farmers are recognizing this."

"But we still have a way to go," Hill admitted. The Federation needs more members. We cannot claim to represent all Ontario farmers until all farmers have joined the federation."

News From Knowles

The question I am most often asked when visiting in my area is the date of the next federal election. This is a favorite guessing game around Parliament Hill.

The majority opinion now suggests that the election will come sometime in October. Only the Prime Minister really knows, because the decisions are his alone.

The Prime Minister's vaccination on the election date has displayed clearly, for all to see, the fatal flaw of leadership indecision. This has been a trade-mark of the Trudeau administration, but it had been successfully camouflaged until recently.

Speculation has it now that the election call might be delayed until as late as the summer of 1973.

Auditor General's Report

Another item of priority last month in the Commons was the tabling of the Auditor General's Report. The Progressive Conservative members of Parliament initiated a special debate on the Auditor General's charge that Parliament is losing control over government spending.

In the report, Mr. Henderson was highly critical of government spending and, in particular, of what he termed "weakening parliamentary control" over allocation of monies.

"This control," he said, "is seriously weakened when funds are credited to special accounts to be available for spending in future years."

The Auditor General is to be commended on the thoroughness of his report and on his honesty under what he termed "extreme pressure from the government side of the House of Commons".

Middle Income Earners

Last week in Quebec City John Munro, Minister of Health and Welfare, while addressing the Canadian Council on Social Development, let the proverbial cat-out-of-the-bag about government taxing programs for the future.

It appears that the overtaxed large middle income group of Canadians are once again to feel the brunt of this government's socialistic policies to raise income levels for those in the lower brackets, perhaps even for those who are not inclined to work.

Mr. Munro said, and I quote, "We must convince the vast majority of Canadians in the middle-income groups that they provide the only real income source from which to derive the necessary revenue to aid those who live in deprivation".

It would appear to most of us that we are now paying too many and too high taxes without being convinced that we should pay more. The Minister also indicated that the wealthy could not be expected to contribute more because it would stifle their initiative.

But surely what he is now suggesting completely demoralizes the hard-working middle income group. The Prime Minister was naturally greatly embarrassed when the official Opposition questioned him in the House the next day if

Destroy Chemical Containers

Chemical spray containers with small amounts of concentrated compounds are a hazard to children and livestock. They are also a potential source of pollution in the immediate area. With increased use of chemical concentrates, says H. E. Wright, farm safety specialist, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food, disposal of these containers can be a problem.

He suggests following these steps in getting rid of empty chemical containers:

When emptying the container, allow it to drain for an extra half minute. An average 5-gallon container will have from 1/2 cup to 1/2 pint left if it isn't properly drained.

Rinse the container with water and add to the tank as part of the spray mix. Do this several times to eliminate most of the chemical from the can.

The container should be crushed to prevent reuse. Recycle the crushed containers to a scrap dealer or bury them at least 18 inches deep in a spot well away from ground water or streams, wells or ponds.

Never burn a plastic chemical container. Bury them. The smoke contains a highly concentrated form of the chemical and may cause serious damage.

Your Blood is the GIFT of LIFE
BE A BLOOD DONOR

this was official government taxing policy that Health Minister Munro was espousing in his speech in Quebec.

He was doubly embarrassed when one of his own backbenchers, Wally Deakon, Liberal M.P. from Toronto, put the same question to Munro.

Cayuga Visit

As is my usual custom, I was present in the Cayuga Village Council Chambers on June 24, it being the last Saturday of the month. Many persons ask me if people take advantage of these arrangements. My answer is "yes". On this June visit I talked with five individuals who came to talk privately.

One such person came to thank me for correcting his unemployment insurance problem brought to me previously. I feel this is important for people to have the opportunity to talk with their M.P. on matters directly affecting them.

As the chairman of the Conservative Committee on Veterans Affairs, I have been deeply involved with the work of the Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs.

This committee listened to briefs by the National Prisoners of War Association and the Hong Kong Veterans, respecting changes in pensions for all prisoners of war who suffered inhumane treatment at the hands of their captors.

The committee spent several meetings drafting a report to the House of Commons, recommending certain basic changes in pensions and war veterans allowances. Hopefully the Minister will see fit to put these changes in the form of legislation.

The House has given third and final reading to a bill amending the Canada Pension Act, which will permit an increase in the number of Pension Commissioners in order to clear up the backlog of over seven thousand applications for pension review.

Counter Clockwise

20 Years Ago
July 3, 1952.

Haldimand County will no longer retain its identity as a separate constituency in the Parliament of Canada, according to the recommendation of the parliamentary redistribution committee, which brought its report to Parliament this week.

In the future the riding, which includes Haldimand County, will also take in Brant County and the riding will be known as Brant-Haldimand.

Both of these ridings are now represented in Parliament by Progressive Conservatives, Earl A. Catherwood for Haldimand and John A. Charlton for Brant.

Over two weeks ago, a thousand keys were mailed to folks in Jarvis and district, with the instructions to bring them into the store to try and open a chest which contained prizes of silver.

Mr. Miller's prize resulted in his taking home a three piece tea service. The grand prize, a chest of silverware, was won by Mrs. Shirley Myke, of Hagersville.
