Collections are a bit slow in the collectors department this year. Probably in the county district because of the late season on the farms. Since last week's report, the following collections totalling $996.50 are on the books.

Those turned in up to 4 p.m. on May 29 are as follows: Jarvis Women's Institute, Mrs. Bob Davidson, Mrs. Ed Stire, Betty Howden, Esther Elliott, Mary Keen, Donald Reu, Eileen Munro, Muffie McCarthy, Kay Mitchell, Dorothy Doughty, this makes a total of 192 contributors to date.

It will be necessary to extend the deadline. The original plan was to campaign from May 15 to May 27. Thanks to those who have finished their route and thanks to those who have donated.

It should not be necessary for collectors to return three times. They are doing this work out of the goodness of their hearts and are all busy people. Also Mr. Stire treasurer is staying at home in order to accept collections.

Please remember the objective is still $2,800. which is needed by those worse off than in this district. Reported last week was $374. plus this week's $622.50 for a total of $996.50.

Editorial Comment:

Importance Of Water

The importance in our daily lives of water cannot be emphasized too often or too greatly. Our very existence and livelihood depends on water and fortunately for all it is one of nature's few "renewable" resources. Run water through the dirtiest industrial application and, eventually, through evaporation, it will cleanse itself.

However, like many of nature's methods, this is too slow for man's impatient rush.

Man, therefore, with his technical knowledge and abilities, is left in charge of renewing water himself or facing extinction.

For years, centuries, man did not care to acknowledge the importance of potable water and charged headlong into the industrial revolution leaving the water for nature to look after.

Now, however, as industry continues to mushroom the water can no longer tolerate the heavy industrial and municipal usage.

Municipalities are beginning to realize the overwhelming importance of water. Without it they cannot expand and if a municipality cannot expand it remains stagnant.

Hagersville and Cayuga are two such municipalities facing this critical involvement with water. Hagersville has become notorious for its poor quality of water and very definitely needs a new clean water supply.

Cayuga, apparently, has ample supplies of potable water, but its supply system is charged with leakage, effectively limiting its ability to supply an increased demand.

The outflow after water has been used is also a critical factor in municipal growth. Again, without adequate treatment, there can be no growth.

Both Hagersville and Cayuga are taking steps to have their treatment plants operated by the province in the hopes that provincial expertise can solve these problems and aid in the expansion of the municipalities.

Through aware municipal leadership these steps are being taken.

But the cost is high. However, this can be balanced against future growth and the welfare of each of the municipality's citizens.

It is only through leadership such as has been shown in these municipalities that the villages will be able to take their share and benefits from the anticipated growth as the region soon begins its shift from agricultural priorities to a more industrial oriented society.

his chickens had the legal right to destroy the dog which had killed them.

He also advised that council should search out the legal implications of paying restitution for the chickens.

Council agreed to ask its solicitor for a legal opinion on the matter and send the bill to its insurance company.

In other business council agreed to accept the tender of Plazek Auto Wreckers of $751 for the old police cruiser. It was the only tender. Deputy-reeve Ross Slote suggested council "take it since it's costing us $2 a day for storage of the cruiser."

Council also agreed to let Chief Burger update the phone system in the police office by placing a second line to the office. Direct phone lines to constables' homes will be disconnected, except for Chief Burger's direct line to the police office.

Council gave third and final reading to a bylaw entering into an agreement with the Ministry of the Environment (formerly OWRC) to operate its municipal sewage treatment plant.

Complaint

Count. Norman Crawford, police committee chairman, said if a funeral home wishes to have a police officer aid in directing traffic, then it should contact the police a few days ahead of schedule. "After all they do have to contact a minister before the funeral. This really isn't an issue at all."

"The funeral occurred on the holiday (May 22) and I certainly wouldn't expect the chief to go through all the newspapers to see what funerals are coming up (so that extra officers can be assigned.)"

Coun. Robert Gedy asked the chief if he would have assigned an auxiliary officer to help out in this case.

Chief Burger said he might have. "But I have the responsibility to try and cut costs. I have to take everybody's requests into account. You can't do it on emotions. You (the council) don't do it when you set the budget. We do, and will try to co-operate 100 per cent to our ability, but I will not back down on sentiment or emotion."

"The officer involved has been spoken to and in my opinion he had a lawful and prudent reason to be absent."

Coun. Nick Basili said he couldn't understand why only one officer was on duty at the time. "It was during the day. I might understand only one officer being on if it had been at night."

Coun. Crawford explained that it was a holiday. Chief Burger said the other officers were scheduled to come on duty later in the day as the traffic began to build up.

The Jarvis Record, Thursday, June 1, 1972 - 3

Coun. Crawford noted that if an off-duty officer had been called it would have meant the town would have had to pay eight hours in overtime pay.

Chief Burger noted that "in a number of cities I phoned to check what other police departments do, I found out funeral homes have to pay for this service."

"Strictly speaking I have no legal obligation to provide this service. However, it has been provided in the past and it has become mis- construed. If it continues, we'll be forced into a lot of expense."

Coun. Gedy said that council must "stick together" in such issues. "Our mill rate went up while others around us declined. But ours went up because we are updating all our departments. If we start to back down, then we'll stay a one horse town."

Reeve Kincaid noted that Hagersville was now paying about $30 per capita for its police force. He noted that in a submission to county council last week that a committee had recommended the police for a restructured Haldimand would remain with the three municipalities which now have police forces (Hagersville, Caledonia and Dunnville) and that the OPP would continue to cover other areas.

Reeve Kincaid voted against the report, along with Cayuga Reeve Ted Powell.
