Editorial Comment:

Liberals On The Move

With what amounted to an overwhelming show of strength, the Haldimand-Norfolk Liberal Association this week elected Dr. T. David Marshall, of Cayuga, as its banner carrier in the upcoming federal election.

The Jarvis Community Centre was filled to overflowing, with some 100 seats having to be set up outside the hall to accommodate the crowd. And, as was evident from the enthusiastic applause and cheering, Dr. Marshall was the only candidate. Two others, John Pow and Jack Lang were nominated, but only Mr. Pow accepted the nomination.

The Liberal party in Haldimand and Norfolk has suffered some crushing defeats in recent elections. In the last federal election William Knowles captured the Progressive Conservative nomination and swept the election from Liberal candidate John Roxburgh.

In the more recent provincial election, the PCs again handed a defeat to the Liberals when James N. Allan, a veteran of some 20 years in the legislature was returned to office.

It was obvious a rebuilding program was needed in the Liberal camp and if this week's show of support is any indication, the rebuilding is having its first effects.

The candidate, Dr. Marshall, who at the age of 33 is just entering politics, has an enviable record of accomplishments in the fields of both medicine and law. While he did not show a commanding presence as a speaker during the nomination, he does appear to have a quiet intent and general feeling for the well being of people that often proves out in the long run over the showy politician.

However, he will be up against a man of proven ability in Mr. Knowles. A man who has carried an election and who has served his constituents well in both Haldimand and his native Norfolk.

But if the Liberals can maintain their enthusiasm and Dr. Marshall can continue to demonstrate his obvious organizational ability, the PCs are going to have a run for their money.

In any event, the contest, which in effect hasn't even been declared, is shaping up into what will likely be a close tough fight.

Milk Producers Urged

To Use Bulk Tanks

Over half the producers who supply milk to Ontario's industrial plants receive at least 20 cents per hundred-weight less for their products than many of their neighbours. This is because they continue to use milk cans for cooling and shipping, says O.R. Irvine, Dairy Division, Kemptville, College of Agricultural Technology.

The actual difference is more than this because losses due to sticking, spillage and low grade or rejected milk, are greater where milk is handled in cans rather than in a bulk cooler. Truckers picking up milk in cans are travelling farther to pick up their loads. Consequently, their rates are increasing.

Grants are available to producers to assist them in making the change from milk cans to bulk tanks. Farmers who make the change should derive satisfaction from handling milk through an easily cleaned bulk tank, says Mr. Irvine. Installation of bulk tank cooling facilities is the first step toward entry into a higher priced market.

Counter Clockwise

20 Years Ago,
Thursday, May 28, 1952.

A heavy downpour of rain all day Saturday forced the complete cancellation of plans for the annual Lions Club May 24 celebration and brought wide disappointment to hundreds of people who had looked forward with anticipation to the event.

Many oldtimers said it was the wettest 24th of May within memory. The rain fell over a wide area and many other centres were forced to cancel plans to celebrate Queen Victoria's birthday.

The rain fell throughout Friday night and on Saturday morning it was apparent that it would be impossible to hold any ball games as the playing field was a sea of mud.

Despite this, the Lions Club hoped that other scheduled events could be carried on. As the morning wore on the rain continued and at 10.30 the decision was made to cancel all events for one week. Efforts are now being made to duplicate the entire program Saturday, May 31.

of Lake Erie in the summer months, is the president of the Chemical Institute of Canada and has been connected with the Atomic Energy project since 1942. His address revealed some of the amazing possibilities through the use of radio-active isotopes in the treatment of disease as well as industrial uses.

Already research has revealed some of the amazing benefits of the scientific advances to mankind.

Mrs. R. A. Miller, of Jarvis, who has held the office as president of the West Haldimand Area Women's Institute for the past three years was presented with a brief case on her retirement from that office at the Third Annual District Meeting, held in Caledonia.

Mrs. George Ridley, of Caledonia, made the address and paid tribute to Mrs. Miller's work as a faithful member of the Women's Institute as well as first president of the West Haldimand Area.

Mrs. William Doughty, of Vanceny, presented the gift to Mrs. Miller.

Water Safety Week

In the days of ancient Greece and Rome swimming was rated highly and actually stressed in the training of warriors. Throughout the middle ages people generally believed swimming or outdoor bathing helped spread epidemics like the black plague which swept the continent of Europe. Swimming, even contact with water, became associated with death. It wasn't until the second half of the nineteenth century that this medieval prejudice began to lose its hold on people and aquatic activities became more accepted and gradually more popular.

Today most people enjoy the water. But a look at the drowning rate for a single summer, even though it has decreased yearly over the past five years, would make you wonder if some people have any respect for the water at all.

And that's part of what the Red Cross Water Safety Service is all about - reminding people from coast to coast that water is fun but deserves respect. The Red Cross Water Safety Service also trains qualified instructors who conduct learn-to-swim programmes from pre-beginner through senior levels, and special survival swimming courses which teach people how to stay alive in deep water.

Next week June 4 - 10 is Red Cross National Water Safety Week. With the warm weather here, people will be getting out to their summer cottages or their favourite lake for weekends to enjoy the sun and water.

So during Red Cross Water Safety Week and throughout the summer Red Cross Water Safety Service reminds you to include water safety in your plans for summer fun.

Make sure your family respects the water. If children do not know how to swim, give them a chance to learn. Contact your local Red Cross Water Safety Service and ask about local swimming programmes.

Keep children in sight at all times. That way you'll be sure they don't take any dangerous risks. Swim only in supervised areas. In unfamiliar waters, debris or sudden drop-offs can hurt you.

Establish a buddy system among family or friends so that every swimmer swims with a buddy. That way if trouble should occur, there'll be someone there to help.

If your family enjoys boating remember to observe simple rules of Red Cross water safety.

Learn and follow "the rules of the road." Respect your boat and know its limitations. Never overcrowd a boat, and make sure each passenger wears a government approved life-jacket.

Stay tuned to weather reports. If a storm threatens, head for shore.

During Red Cross National Water Safety Week and throughout the summer, remember to observe simple rules of water safety. Enjoy the water, but respect it.

Drownings can be prevented, but only if you and your family respect the water. This summer remember to stay alive with Red Cross water safety.
