that in the last 25 years the average price of garden produce has only increased by six per cent to the grower. Some produce has even decreased in price. Last year strawberries at their peak harvest retailed for 25 to 30 cents per quart. Twenty years ago they retailed at 30-35 cents per quart. Tomatoes sold to a wholesaler at 40 cents per six quart basket were found in a chain store in Huntsville priced at $2.98 per

Sometimes gardeners are stuck with produce that has been harvested while the supply was plentiful and warehouses filled. Many products such as strawberries, potatoes, tomatoes, peaches, eggs, pork, butter etc. are imported below our cost of production, often subsidized in the country of its origin.
