Turner's First Budget

Federal Finance Minister John Turner's maiden budget handed down Monday evening was almost swept off the front page of the daily newspapers by United States President Richard Nixon's latest moves in the Vietnam war.

However, Mr. Turner's budget bears examination for as pre-election budget it probably left a lot of Canadians trifle dissatisfied.

About the only concession to the general public is the cost of attending university. The budget made allowance for a $50 a month tax exemption for living costs.

Those who do benefit most from the budget is that sector of Canadians who most assuredly need it - the old age pensioners and the veterans. They will be receiving pension increases ranging from about $3 to $30 a month. Veterans will receive an added $25 million across the country in additional pensions.

The budget made its greatest impact on corporations where the general corporation tax is to be reduced to 40 per cent from 49 per cent on income from manufactured or processed products for sale or lease in Canada.

There is also a reduction from 25 per cent to 20 per cent for smaller businesses manufacturing or processing goods for Canada.

These four major points in the budget - the tax incentives to businessmen, the old age pension increases, the veterans pension increases and the students exemptions add up to a bill of $925 million for the government in the next year.

The main aim of the budget, it appears, is to generate jobs through the tax concessions to business. If it works, and helps reduce the number of Canadians on the unemployment roles below the six per cent it now stands at, and at the same time doesn't permit rampant inflation, then it would appear the budget is very definitely one the government will be able to go to the country with as an election begins to loom more closely.

Poverty

Recently I have done some reading on the subject of poverty and its effects. One thing I learned is that the name has been changed. Poverty is "inner city; low income; subsidized housing," and "slum" is no longer used. Children of such an area are described as "environmentally deprived; socially handicapped." And so on.

Whatever you call it the result is the same, there is a group of people in every city (and in other places) who have no income but that provided by welfare and there are those who live in sub-standard houses.

One article I read pointed out that children from middle class homes do better, both in school and after, than those from slum areas. The writer complains that the whole education system is geared to the middle class pupil. He asks what is the use of textbooks that show every house with a nice green lawn to a kid whose only idea of a lawn is a vacant lot full of broken bottles.

Beyond such minor irritants is the important question of health and the effect of poor health on a person's learning ability. Then there is the home in which such a child lives (or should I say "exists"). Some of us have seen photos in the Hamilton paper which show the interiors of some slum homes. What incentive does such a home give to a child to do good work at school? Teachers in schools in a slum area are said to be of poorer quality than those in middle class areas, but who could blame a teacher for wanting to get away from such an area?

What can be done about it? We cannot issue special text books for slum schools. As a rough division I would say that poor people can be divided in to two groups: Those who are poor through no fault of their own but who just cannot get jobs, they can be helped; those who are poor because they do not want to work, they cannot be helped. The fact is that some members of society do not mind living in squalor and do not want to be rescued, they are happier as they are, and their children, who may be quite intelligent, must suffer.

Unfortunately the two groups are not separated in the minds of most people and the man who wants to work but cannot get a job is placed on the same level as the man who does not want to work. We have plenty of welfare systems and no one needs to starve, but to get rid of slum homes and slum schools would require something like a revolution -- in thinking anyway.

The village tax rate has been set at 46 mills for the second successive year at the May council meeting held Tuesday night.

The mill rate is high again this year in view of the increase in education costs and in anticipation of the county rate. The rate for public school costs was set at 15 mills, compared with 12.5 mills last year.

The county rate will be 7.2 mills, as compared with 6 mills.

A change in the methods of allocating the general fund keeps the all around taxation at 46 mills again this year.

Six 50-year honorary membership certificates were presented to Brothers of the Orange Order on Monday night at the regular meeting at which Rt. Worshipful, Brother Elia Gray,

Crappie Time Is Here

To an "uneducated" listener, the statement that "you'd better not horse o'le paper-mouth or he'll get away" is a lot of nonsense. But avid crappie fishermen all over the country will know what's being said. The thin tissue making up a crappie's mouth requires dexterity and ease when landing the fish.

Crappie are one of the most plentiful game fish found in lakes and streams throughout America, and - happily - they're also rated tops as table fare. Of interest to anglers is some-on-the-water research by Red Fisher, the fishing expert at Mercury outdoors indicating that the next few weeks could provide the best crappie fishing of the year.

Biologists have shown that the last few weeks of spring and the first week or so of summer is an excellent crappie fishing time. This period comes just before the crappie spawning season, when fishing success will dip until cool weather arrives in fall.

During the pre-spawning period crappie tend to concentrate near the mouths of small creeks and streams, along banks with overhanging trees (feeding on insects falling into the water), and generally in areas where the water is undisturbed by wind action.

Most experienced crappie fishermen use a boat. Riggering two or three cane poles with minnows (less than two inches long, and lightly hooked through the skin behind the dorsal fin), they set the bobbers so the baits will be at different levels beneath the surface. Then they slowly work along shore and around rock points, seeking underwater debris that provides shelter, and generally staying within 50 feet of shore.

Fly fishermen can have a lot of fun fishing for crappie with both dry and wet flies. For surface fishing, use tactics similar to those employed for trout. Dry flies normally used for other panfish are suitable. Wet flies should imitate minnows. Best periods of day for fly fishing are early morning and from dusk to sunset. Another thing to remember is that when crappie are actively feeding on the surface, you will usually be able to see them.

The Jarvis Record, Thursday, May 11, 1972 - 3

Grand Master of Ontario West was a special guest with Malen O. Wilkins, the Master presiding.

An attendance of close to 100 witnessed the presentation by Mr. Gray to Joseph McBride, of Hagersville, who at 91 years of age has compiled a 73-year almost unbroken membership; also to Isaac Jepson and Thomas Jepson, of Hagersville, 61 years each; Robert Jepson, Oneida, 57 years; W.D. Lindsay, Hagersville, 58 years and Frank Booth, Nanticoke, 53 years membership.

Gerrard Dubois, formerly of Sudbury, was sentenced last Thursday for two months in penitentiary on four charges of forging Canadian Postal Money Orders at four banks in Port Arthur, April 9. The term will be concurrent with two years given Dubois on a similar charge in Fort William. The money orders were among those stolen at Jarvis a few weeks ago.

Letter Box

Dear Sir:

It is with interest that I read about a suggested new airport, and also the various statements MPs and letters from the general public.

Surely it is time that all concerned took a pace back and surveyed the situation. The most obvious place for a modern, international airport is not in the midst of suburbia, but set in a beneficial location for all concerned, including pilots and travellers.

The location, I suggest, should be where planes can "take off" into a prevailing wind and away from high rise buildings, farms and residences, and that they will be within easy surface commuting distances of other airports and larger cities, i.e. London, Kitchener, Brantford, Malton, Hamilton and Niagara Falls. Malton and Buffalo, I believe, have experienced bus shuttle service, with passengers and all of the inconveniences.

Some of the smaller airports are requesting permission to expand so let us choose the ideal location Haldimand County. It was deemed a nice location for the wartime Bomber training purposes (Bomber Command, I believe) coupled with this both the federal and provincial ministers of transport could use a lot of our TAX money to build an overhead monorail rapid transit to interconnect airports and cities, from London to Malton and from Malton to Haldimand Airport and from Haldimand M.R.T.S., services radiate to the surrounding cities. I have been told that Canada is a land of untold resources, and we have also untold and unlimited, unemployed skilled workers, patiently waiting for work, so then I make a plea to all Members of the Parliaments, to get off the political seats and roll up their sleeves, to create worth while work to the benefit of all, let us move into the twentieth century immediately. Maurice R. Payne, Nanticoke, Ontario.
