Federation Facts

by Otto Crone
Many Haldimand County farms, homes and cottages will lose their supply of natural gas if plans made by their supplier are carried out.

Most of the concerned individuals are unhappy at the prospect of losing their major source of fuel. However, they have neglected to force the gas company to prove their need to discontinue this service.

The Haldimand Federation of Agriculture has been in contact with the ministry of Energy and Resources concerning this situation. Their reply quotes a section of an energy board act which does not allow the gas company to shut off its services at its own pleasure without a hearing, if there are objections.

The question now arises; are people going to continue complaining to each other while company representatives canvas the area pressing for agreements to discontinue the gas service or are they going to stand up and face a company?

The laws which have been written are for anyone to use, private individuals as well as giants.

The ministry of energy and resources has indicated a willingness to hold hearings to give both the gas company and gas customers an opportunity to present their arguments.

However, there will be no hearings unless someone demands them. In this case, the onus is on the people who are unhappy about the future loss of their natural gas.

Minister Welcomed Back

The members of the congregation of Cheapside United Church held a Welcome Home party for their Minister, Rev. Arnold Creasor, his wife and sons Dwight and Dana on Sunday evening on the Wilson MacDonald Memorial Museum grounds.

Mr. Creasor has just returned from attending a summer course at Pine Hill Divinity College, Halifax N.S. The Nanticoke congregation were guests. Over 70 persons enjoyed the horse drawn hayride provided by Harold Nie.

A program was enjoyed while seated around a campfire. Music was supplied by Mrs. Linda Nie Smith, her twin sister Mrs. Lois Nie Lofthouse and Dale Werner. Lunch cooked by the fire was hot dogs and coffee provided by the Cheapside United Church Women.

This was a truly enjoyable evening marked by a spirit of warm fellowship in welcoming the Creasors' back for another year in charge of Cheapside and Nanticoke Churches.

On The Green

On Aug. 22, the Hagersville Lawn Bowling Club had their twelfth jinyet with 27 members out.

The winners were: Ladies high, Alvia Almas with 2 wins and 24 plus 3; second high, Ruth Hagan with 2 wins and 16; mens high, Pete Stoddart with 2 wins and 24 plus 9; second high, Clint Strome with 2 wins and 18.

I will continue the story on The Romance of Bowl Manufacture.

With this achievement, table testing became more of a success but the technique of biasing and defective bowl correcting had still not been mastered although considerable progress had been made in that direction. Bowlers could not appreciate the difficulties that at that time militated against good bowling. There certainly was the incentive and the opportunity for William Hensell to do something positive and constructive.

The battle against inaccuracy hadn't yet been won but W. D. Hensell had started the long struggle destined to ultimately produce today's modern accurate precision-built Hensell bowl.

At this time many new composition materials were being tried. They were relatively stable and free from many of the disadvantages of lignum-vitae. W. D. Hensell spent most of his spare time studying literature in connection with compositions. Eventually he came to the conclusion that vulcanite (hard rubber) was the most suitable composition available at that time for bowl manufacture.

Returning to Melbourne in 1918, W. D. Hensell was fortunate to meet Mr. Roberts, Works Manager of Dunlop Rubber Co., a keen bowler who had brought his wooden bowls along for re-testing. This was a grand opportunity to exploit the ideas he had conceived and he explained the many advantages a hard rubber bowl would have over wood and the potential demand for such a bowl. Mr. Roberts became impressed and responsive to Mr. Hensell's enthusiasm.

As a result, after many experiments a round Ebonite ball approximately five inches in diameter was produced, turned and made into a bowl. When tested on the table, however, it was found to have an eccentric action, being heavier on one side which caused it to be out of balance.

Further experiments and more care produced twelve consistent rubber balls. They were turned into bowls -- the twelve tested perfectly and rubber bowls, the first in the world, were born.

I will continue next week.
