A motorcyclist, involved in a head-on collision on Highway 4 Sunday night, was reported in satisfactory condition in the Hamilton General Hospital yesterday.

Keith Patrick, 18, of Hamilton sustained a fractured pelvis when his motorbike was in collision with a car driven by Oscar Culjak, 47, of Stoney Creek. The accident occurred in front of Hewitt's Dairy Bar, one mile north of Hagersville.

Following the completion of the business and closing ceremonies, the June committee served the traditional strawberry and cake refreshments, which closed our activities until September.

Estimated damage to the motorcycle was $600 and to the car $1,000.

ELMER'S GIVING AWAY BIKES

Summer holidays are here, at least for school children. Now each child has an additional 6 hours a day to expose himself to traffic hazards - playing, riding bicycles, exploring, hiking and going to and from parks, beaches, swimming pools and shopping centres.

In 1972, according to the Ontario Safety League, 77 pedestrians and 37 cyclists between the ages of 5 and 14 were fatally injured in traffic accidents in Ontario. A further 3,017 pedestrians and 1,656 cyclists were injured. This is a tragic record of death and suffering.

Traffic safety drills are common during the school year thanks to conscientious teachers and police safety officers. Elmer, the ever popular Safety Elephant, says, "We can't disrupt the safety thought train for the summer months and we won't. The potential of reaching thousands upon thousands of children with a review of my basic traffic safety rules is tremendous and paramount."

True to his word, Elmer is working hard this summer, planning and operating his 1973 Summer Safety Contest, a 4-part series combining fun and possible prizes for participants with a subtle lesson in traffic safety for all along the way.

All Ontario newspapers published in English have been asked to donate space for 1 contest every week for 4 weeks, beginning the week of July 23. So far, response from editors indicates that this, the 13th operative year of Elmer's Summer Safety Contest, will be the most popular ever.

Elementary school students must colour the contest entry and indicate the Elmer rule being broken. In Ontario, Elmer is giving away 4 CCM bicycles each contest and 50 second prizes containing combination lock, bell and rear view mirror.

The Record urges you to get all kids on the block to study up on Elmer's 6 rules, read them, think about them, remember them, but most of all, use them every day.

THE MONARCHY
The Royal Visit prompts a consideration as to the British monarchical system of government, which is also the Canadian system.

In principle it is fairly simple, but difficulties arise when one goes into detail. In theory, the monarch is the sole and only head of the State and in practice, all laws are made in her (or his) name.

However, the monarch does not actually rule, the laws are made and passed by two Houses of Parliament - the House of Commons and the Senate (which corresponds to the British House of Lords).

There is a third group, the Privy Council, which never meets and which has become purely ornamental and honorary. Its members are named by the Prime Minister and are entitled to be called "Honourable." A smaller group within this group are the "Right Honourables," they are largely ex-Prime Ministers.

To become law, a bill must originate in Parliament, in the House of Commons or the Senate. It must be read and passed three times in the Chamber of Origin and then sent to the other house where again it must receive three readings. Then it is taken to the Monarch who signs it and it becomes law. If the Senate amends a bill sent to it from the Commons, then the bill, as amended, must be returned to the Commons and the whole procedure is repeated (except the Royal Assent).

In England, where the Monarch lives only a few blocks from Parliament, it is relatively easy to get Royal Assent for any measure, but in Canada, we face a different situation because the Queen can only live permanently in one house and she cannot live in Ottawa.

To overcome this difficulty, an office has been created, the Governor-General. He lives in Ottawa, headed by Parliament, and represents the Monarch in Canada. He gives the "Royal Assent" to legislation and no Bill can become law without his signature. I am not sure but I think that the Governor General is nominated by the Prime Minister and appointed by the Queen.

Our Provinces are not sovereign states as are the States in the U.S., but in practice the same rules apply to the Head of State in each Province, except that the Head of State is called "the Lieutenant - Governor."

REGIONAL PLANNING IN RELATION TO FARMING AS SEEN BY O.F.A.

(1) The expansion of urban areas and the loss of farm land is creating problems for society.

(2) "Land-use" planning or "Regional planning" is a plan to set up a system of boundaries for the most efficient use of our land resources.

(3) Farm land is of major importance because it produces food. While farm land and produce from it is not in as high demand as land for housing, there could be a shortage of farm land in the year 2000 if society is not careful now.

(4) A high percentage of class 1 and 2 soils in Ontario lie in areas which are threatened by urban development and because the greater distance of farms from urban centres would add to the costs of production, a solution should not be sought in relocating farms away from cities.

(5) Society will also ensure that farmers and their children will want to stay in farming. The economic disadvantage of the farmer and the difficulty of hiring farm labour are making this problem more important.

(6) Good regional planning will do the following for farming (a) designate certain lands for farming. (b) steer development clear from class land 2 soils. By doing this, it will hope to accomplish these goals: (a) to preserve the best farmland for food production and (b) create a healthy and interesting environment for urban areas.

(7) (a) It is also necessary that governments develop policies which will assure that farming is profitable before they zone land into farming. (b) One policy that must be set out as basic planning good sense is the re-servicing of certain areas of the province where livestock and poultry farming can be carried on unmolesed.

(8) Everyone will benefit from these accomplishments, and therefore, it is not fitting to expect a small group to pay. The question thus resolves around whether there are any costs involved in this regional planning.

A PRAYER OF THANKFULNESS

As I write, a prayer of thankfulness is on my lips, because I live in Haldimand County, because I am one of its people, and share the joys and sorrows of its people, its wonderful, old fashioned, concerned people.

A couple of years ago, a well educated, sophisticated young boy came to visit our home. He felt sorry for us having to live in Haldimand County and said "Well, you have television, anyway."

"Yes indeed," I replied, "We have television and one of the greatest gifts given to man." "Like what?" he said.

"Like the plain, ordinary, good citizen of Haldimand, who knows his neighbour, who senses if his neighbour needs help, who is there to lend a hand."

Our young friend said good bye and left for his skyscraper apartment in the city. Today I reply to him.

It happened in North Cayuga, but it could have happened in South Cayuga, North or South Walpole, Rainham, Seneca, Oneida, Canboro, Dunn, Sherbrook or Moulton.

Two years ago a horrible accident laid my husband low. Immediately, without having to ask, scores of good friends were there to help me if I needed help. A neighbour kept our lane blown out at all times. If my car got stuck on the ice or snow, he or his family were there to get me out. Messages came from the Haldimand folk, not by the tens but from ten times ten. As I travelled through the County, its citizens didn't talk to me about our illness, but in the eyes of its people was transferred to me the spirit of prayer. Without talking they said, "We are with you and yours."

That's Haldimand my friend - that's what I mean when I say, "Haldimand has everything." I am a simple rural teacher and I planned to retire. A few teachers with whom I worked decided to have a tea in my honour on Sunday, June 24th at J. L. Mitchener Elementary School, Cayuga.

Would anyone come? I wondered and feared. Would my husband and I be standing there alone? I should not have fussed. This is Haldimand, good old Haldimand, where its citizens are caring, loving, concerned people. They came, yes they came, not by tens but by ten times ten. They made us feel loved.

To my young city friend, again I say "Haldimand has everything - everything worthwhile - it has people that are real people and we are grateful. To the parents, teachers, boys and girls of Haldimand I say "Yours is a rich heritage. Let Haldimand change if it must, but have its people remain the same. It can't happen if we don't all pull together and work at preserving the great gift our forefathers bestowed on us, their children.
