We will be printing and binding the pages ourselves," Mary Lou said. And the group plans to do 13 copies, which will be distributed to schools and libraries in local and neighboring towns.

Why write a history of Hagersville?

Audrey told the Record the last published history of Hagersville was done in their centennial year, 1950. Also, Audrey wrote a short history of Hagersville when she was in grade 13 at Hagersville Secondary School. Now, she is looking forward to expanding on that class project and bringing it up to date. "This is something the whole community can benefit from, as well as newcomers," she said.

1973 seemed the ideal time to do the project while Hagersville is still a small town, Mary Lou added.

With development at the lake mushrooming, this area is going to change quickly. "It's not going to be like this much longer . . . The small town image is going to crumble," she said.

The girls began preparing the details of their project in January for submission for an Opportunities For Youth grant in March. Suzanne Hamilton, OFY project officer in Welland, later phoned the group and said "it looked like a really good project," Audrey said.

Rather than dividing the project up, everyone is working together, Janet told the Record.

The second week in August is the finishing date for the project. All three girls agreed the project now seems harder than they first thought it would be.

Will the history of Hagersville end here? The group will be approaching people for viewpoints on future expansion. And, Mary Lou said she hopes someone will write another history in 25 years. Or, maybe this history book could be updated every 5 years.

Starting sometime in July, the Record will print columns written by the group on the history of Hagersville. Mary Lou, Janet and Audrey would appreciate it if anyone with information or photographs, which could assist them with their project, please phone 768-3327. OFY IN 1973

In announcing the 1973 Opportunities For Youth program, Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner, said a total of 4,334 projects emphasizing community benefits, would provide summer employment for 36,152 young Canadians.

He said average cost per project is $3,209, down from last year's average of between $10,000 and $11,000. This drop is due to increased support from private firms and individuals in the communities, who providing supplies, funds and facilities to many of the projects.

Among the participants, 32 per cent are university students, 31 per cent are students of secondary schools or high schools, 27 per cent are community college students and 10 per cent are non-students.

Mr. Faulkner said "emphasis was placed on community services and involvement, which have been goals of the program since its inception in 1971 . . .

"In this year's program, a successful effort was made to increase participation from rural areas. The average ratio across the country is 55 per cent rural projects and 45 per cent urban projects.

"Female participation has also risen in the year's program. Women make up 49.5 per cent of the total number of participants in the projects and men 50.5 per cent.

"Opportunities For Youth, which has approved grants totalling 35.6 million to date, is part of an $5.4 million federal government package, Summer '73, designed to create useful employment and activities for young Canadians during the summer," he said.

table Tom Couldridge of Niagara told the Record. Some are interested in pursuing a police career, some are retired officers and some are just interested citizens.

They are trained in firearms, radio communication and general law enforcement to supplement the regular O.P.P. forces.

Constable Couldridge said the men meet twice a month for training and work two eight hour shifts a month.

The auxiliary policemen accompany a regular officer. And, they quite often work on statutory holidays directing traffic or where crowds gather. In case of a national emergency, the auxiliary police constable or officer would assume regular policing responsibilities, constable Couldridge said.

Mr. and Mrs. James Allen (MPP-Haldimand-Norfolk) also inspected the officers Wednesday night.

Auxiliary officers are: Inspector Danford Johnson, Sergeant Allan Winger, Corporal George Slat, Corporal James Roloson, Corporal Fred Williams.

Auxiliary constables are: John Ackland, Don Anderson, John Barnes, Vernice Bartlett, David Broughton, Benny Bulday of one of the most faithful and hard working members of the W.I. in Haldimand County for the past 60 years.

"Mrs. R.A. Miller is today celebrating her 80th birthday and we are pleased to be able to acknowledge the event and pay a small tribute to this outstanding citizen of Jarvis.

"This Saturday, June 2 is another important date in Mrs. Miller's life. On June 2, 1913, the Varsity Branch of the W.I. was organized with Miss Jessie Killins acting as secretary. At that time, Mrs. Miller was a young school teacher in the Varsity District, where she met her future husband and married.

"Mrs. Miller has four sons and sixteen grandchildren.

"There was a history book of the Institute of Haldimand County published in 1938. Mrs. Miller was one of the five ladies on the editing committee.

"When the history of the West Haldimand Institute was published in 1962, Mrs. Miller was on that committee and we can say that she provided a very sizable contribution to all the work involved in the formation of this book.

"When the historical Society was formed in Haldimand in 1926, county council cooperated with the W.I. to bring this about. A splendid collection of antiques

O.P.P. officer in charge is Corporal G. E. Foster and officer commanding No. 4 District O.P.P. is Superintendent A. E. Kirby.

The Members of the W.I. presented Mrs. Miller with a gift and sang Happy Birthday. We, at the Record also extend our best wishes to Mrs. Miller.

Always an active church member, she has been Treasurer in the Presbyterian Church, superintendent of a Sunday School and president of groups in the church.

"Her Friends' Neighbours' column in the West Haldimand Record makes this weekly paper unique. So few weeklies have such a folksy column about the happenings of the local people anymore. She has a distinct flair for words and an excellent memory. She also writes other material for the paper.

Mrs. Miller was the first District President for West Haldimand Institute, organized in 1949 when county memberships became too large. Mrs. R. Hunt was secretary treasurer and together they came to Garnet on March 29, 1950 to organize our branch. We had never attended a District Annual until 1950 and we were inspired by her businesslike procedure in conducting that meeting. She has always been a person to get things organized and make them work.

"Once again this spring, we noticed in the paper she has gone out collecting for the Community Chest in Jarvis. For many years she was chairman of this worthwhile project and always worked on their behalf.

"For someone with so much zest for living and doing for others, she can never grow older. She contributes so much to the community and surrounding district without a thought of remuneration."

fair. "Let's split the difference between the two," Mr. Crawford suggested. He felt $500 was "kind of steep." Council finally settled for a $400 maximum limit.

The new fire agreement will be reviewed annually.

Also at council: * Reeve John Kincaid told council he met with Andrew Cherkas, a Toronto real estate man who directed land assembly operations (14,000 acres) near Jarvis, on Tuesday.

Mr. Kincaid said Mr. Cherkas informed the group he was not a speculator, but a developer. And, he did not want to interfere with the growth of surrounding municipalities.

Mr. Kincaid said he asked if Hagersville could hook up to the water and sewer lines, when the area is serviced. Mr. Cherkas told him "yes," he said.

* Councillor Gedy reported on the employment incentive program.

"Everything is going along fine. Our biggest problem is that we don't seem to have any unemployed," he said. The village is $1,300 to the better, he added, but we did not get as much done as expected.

* Councillor Fred Brock reported he received a request for a sidewalk on one side of King Street by the hospital because so many ladies with small children are forced to walk on the pavement.

* Councillors agreed the public washrooms should be kept open as close as possible to village store hours. Last Saturday they were closed when a public works employee had the day off.

Councillor Gedy suggested that Hagersville police officers could open and close the doors.

* Village engineer, Hans Jansen, received a grade A in a short course on pollution control conducted by the Ministry of Environment.

Federation News Sunshine Club

by Otto Crone

Farmers across Ontario are earning extra money and meeting new people through a farm vacation plan initiated by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

Farmers are well-coming city-bred or country-born folks into their home on a seasonal or year-round basis to enjoy the experience of country living. While providing a relaxing and healthy atmosphere for grateful vacationers, farmers are also reaping $50 plus for adults and $25 plus for children per week.

For many children, picnics and hikes in fragrant woods, hunting and fishing, learning about nature, country auctions, campouts and farm animals are completely new experiences. Hosts and guests alike revel in the new discovery of country life and country lore. They may come for a day, a week-end, a week or as long as you care to be hosts.

There are not enough vacation farms in Ontario to provide for all those looking for a new and different kind of vacation!

If you would like to meet new people from Ontario and other provinces, earn money, entertain, have extra help on the farm and give vacationers new insight into country living, write to the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, 387 Bloor St. East, Toronto to find out how you can become a farm vacation host.
