It was decided to visit the adult opportunity Center on Nov. 4. The Resolutions were read over that are to be voted on at the Area Convention. Card parties were discussed. Mrs. Vera Harrop program Convener opened with a poem, "Autumn," Mrs. Vera Cherry read a poem on Thanksgiving. Mrs. Roy Jepson read an article "The World is Mine." The motto - The Best things in life are free - take time to observe them, was well prepared and given by Mrs. J. Nichol. Mrs. Harrop then read an article on perfumes. She showed us an assortment of perfumes she had brought back from her recent trip to France.

Our guest Miss Dorothy Roulston took us on a trip - around the world with books the local library. She had a number of books of several countries one might like to visit. Anyone thinking of travelling would be wise to study these which are available at the Hagersville Library. Mrs. Harrop then held an oral contest on capitals of the world. Mrs. B. There are two basic components in the Eberhardt system—an easily transportable, tractor pto-driven press and 7 ft. 10 in. diameter plastic sack with a maximum length of 52 ft. and a storage capacity of between 75 and 100 tons, depending on the crop to be stored.

- Advantages of the system include:
- no capital outlay for horizontal or tower silos
 - unlimited sealed storage capacity
 - low labor requirement
 - stored material easily extracted for feeding
 - minimum wastage
 - no odor

Chopped material is fed into the 17 rpm press by any conventional forage box or dump wagon although a rear unloading unit is the most efficient.

The plastic sack is drawn over the shaping tunnel of the press. A tubular frame carrying rope netting and attached by steel ropes to tension drums on the Silopress is then set in position.

The sealed end of the sack is placed against the frame. During filling only feed pressure moves the press slowly forward, the rate and therefore the consolidation being controlled by adjustable drum braking on the pay-out of the steel ropes, leaving the filled sack on the ground.
