

The federal government's railway transport committee recently approved the removal of freight service and station agents from 12 southern Ontario municipalities served by Canadian National, including Jarvis. Other area municipalities affected by the decision are Hagersville, Cayuga, Dunnville and Burford. None of these municipalities protested the removal of freight service and station agents proposed two years ago by CN who were introducing a computerized Servo-Centre system of centralized freight handling for the area out of Brantford. Pictured above is the Jarvis station.
